Idealistic conviction – elusive practice? The challenging quest for vulnerable mission in a middle-class suburb of Cape Town

(Marcus Grohmann, to be one of the speakers at the upcoming September 2021 conference, tells us the anticipated topic of his paper)

This paper will be a personal account of our time as a family in South Africa over the last five years and of our journey with God and with each other. It will explain how the principles of vulnerability became increasingly important to us as we started to work with a multicultural university ministry and as I embarked on a PhD project studying reconciliation in multicultural churches. We will be Marcus (left), and family. looking at our main challenges to vulnerability – living in the English-dominated, middle-class university precincts – before considering steps we have gradually learned to take that help us let go of some of our dominance as White Westerners. This will be followed by a consideration of the benefits of vulnerability we have experienced with a focus on the learning and use of the Xhosa language. The paper will be concluded by looking ahead at what we see ourselves doing in the near future where we hope for vulnerable mission to take a more distinct shape in our lives.

Conference.

Vulnerable Mission: English and Dollars Powering Ministry, Good Idea?

We urge some missionaries to practice their ministry using the languages and resources of the people they are reaching. This will honour the indigenous. It is a Christ-like starting point for sharing the Gospel in contextualized ways.

We will be discussing issues such as:

- Practicalities and ramifications of use of indigenous languages by Western missionaries.
- How does translation to and from an indigenous language affect missionary work?
- While finances are needed for mission work, how can one ensure that finances do not dominate?

- What good practices are there to ensure a missionary remains vulnerable in their local context?
- How to engage in mission without exuding (excessive) power.
- What organisational structures enable vulnerability on the side of Western missionaries on the ground.
- What help can we offer churches who want to engage directly in cross cultural mission to avoid pitfalls of power.
- Tentmaking and business as mission models that leave the Westerner vulnerable. (Can the commercial world engage in mission without promoting ‘ evils’ of capitalism?)
- When the uneven spread of wealth is itself an injustice, how can one use one’s surplus to enact global justice.
- How can mission agencies promote vulnerability, when dominant models of understanding presented by a vast global media are rooted in positivism and liberalism?
- Is vulnerability the key to contextualisation?
- Theology traditionally draws strongly on metaphor. However local metaphors from the majority world are unfamiliar to the Westerner, and vice versa. How can one then engage in theology interculturally?
- Where politics and ‘religion’ are not separate categories, missionaries need to be careful not to get bogged down in unanticipated conflicts.
- Is miracle a post-enlightenment category? Is ‘magic’ a normal aspect of life? What does this imply for cross cultural missionary engagement?
- Does the introduction of outside technology result in exploitation and enslavement? or liberation?
- Globalisation as a force that cripples the periphery. How can the voices of those at the periphery be heard, and their dignity guarded?
- When short-term mission has become poverty-tourism intended to adorn facebook pages with images of charity – what is the way forward?
- Can Westerners relate to non-Western missionaries without dominating them?
- The bible is God’s inspired book, but theological training is dominated by Western curricula. Are there alternative paradigms for local-context training of Christian workers?

- Making Disciples or Marketing Jesus? Those who are members of missionexus may find the following short article interesting. The author tells how he started his missionary career in Asia knowing how to communicate the Gospel in pat succinct ways. He gradually learned, that did not work, but that instead it was appropriate to wonder at the difference the Gospel was already making in people's lives. <https://missionexus.org/making-disciples-or-marketing-jesus/>
